Navantia provides different e-mail addresses on its WEBSITE as a communication channel in regard to the purposes established in each case. Likewise, Navantia may sometimes use e-mail as the channel of communication in regard to parties with whom it carries out business.

The data controller's data and those of the data protection officer are provided in the section PRIVACY POLICY.

In accordance with the relevant purpose, the legitimate grounds for data processing of the user/sender of the e-mail by Navantia are:

- a) Fulfilling the legitimate interests pursued by the data controller.
- b) Consent granted by users/senders, where applicable and as is the case of processing, stems from authorization by users when sending information about any product and/or service offered by Navantia.
- c) If there is a contractual or pre-contractual relationship, in cases when processing is due to contractual relations or service providing.

It is not expected to transfer any data to third parties or to third party countries or international organizations, except in compliance with a legal obligation.

The personal details compiled through e-mail shall be kept for the time necessary to fulfil the purpose they were collected for, and to determine any possible liabilities that could stem from the aforementioned purpose and from data processing.

The rights pursuant to data protection that users/senders of e-mail are entitled to are established in the section RIGHTS.
